FORT WAYNE, Ind., June 24.—Fort Wayne defeated Wheeling to-day in one of the prettiest games played this season. The visitors objected to a decision by Umpire Carputhers, giving Harper safe at the home plate, ingamuch as the batter interfered with the throw to the plate by Rothermel, causing Ritter to miss an easy out, which throw to the plate by Rothermel, causing Ritter to miss an easy out, which virtually cost the game. Several other decisions at first base kept the visitors from scoring. It is to be regretted that wheeling kindly consented to the transfer of these games, which were scheduled at Wheeling to receive such a raw deal, and should be sufficient reason for not consenting to another transfer. Pardee pitched in fine form, and should have won his game. Wheeling opens at home Wednesday with the Toledo feam. Score:

There is very often a girl behind the man behind the gun. Most married men would be at home oftener if their wives were at home less. A man never knows whether a woman is really beautiful or not until after he has seen her without her corsets and with no collar on.

Independent Estimate of McKinley. Washington (Ind.) Post: That Mr. McKinley would be renominated was a foregone conclusion. Logic and senti-ment were in a gigantic conspiracy to that end. No one else has been thought that end. No one else has been thought of since the declaration of war against. Spain. No one else could have been thought of by any honorable and conscientious Republican. Under Mr. Mc-Kinley's rule, the nation has entered upon what promises to be the most momentous episode in all its history, and, even now, we have scarcely crossed the threshold of the immensurable evolution which was set in motion two evolution which was set in motion tw ed the threshold of the immeasurable evolution which was set in motion two years or more ago. Even though the party were without gratitude or loyalty mere selfah prudence would have compelled it to retain the leader who has thus far guided us with courage and wisdom, with a pure heart and with spottess hands.

There is more than this, however, in the spontaneous action which the Republican party has just taken. Mr. McKinley has not only commanded the respect and confidence of his immediate followers; he has appealed with singular force to the sympathy and affection of all classes and conditions of his fellow-countrymen. The American people believe in the purity of his purpose and the nobility of his impulses and desires. Millions will vote against him, but they will abate nothing of their personal affection and esteem. Not one will wish him ill or speak a word to his discredit as a man. He has endeared himself to the whole country by the exhibition of those attractive attributes which make men beloved in all lands and agos—kindness, sympathy, humane, and generous instincts. And, most important men beloved in all lands and ages-kindness, sympathy, humane, and serous instincts. And, most important of all, he has illustrated in his private life the domestic virtue and simplicity which the American people hold in undying reverence and admiration.

Certainty the Republican party could have found no stronger candidate. Indeed, at such a time as this, the leadership of any other man would plunge the Republican organization into frremediable disaster.
